

Q.1 Read the given passage and answer the four questions that follow.

It's essential to focus on what you control, especially when life feels difficult. This mindset is often overshadowed by the flood of information we consume daily. For instance, I spent 30 minutes this morning going down a rabbit hole after reading about Bitcoin. I ended up lost in unrelated Wikipedia pages.

Stoicism teaches us that time is our most valuable resource. While it's nice to know many things, most of the information we consume has little real value. We waste time on trivial pursuits, like reading negative news, stalking social media profiles, or watching shows just to "kill time." Why kill something so precious?

We're quick to get upset by things we can't control. Responding to every little thing we encounter is a habit. But true happiness comes from accepting that we don't control most things. Worrying about global issues like recessions, wars, or natural disasters is unproductive. Indifference to things outside our control is the key to happiness.

Happiness comes from meaningful activities: good friendships, enjoyable work, reading thought-provoking books, walking in nature, working out, or watching a great movie. For example, a recent Saturday was fulfilling because I spent time reading, writing, walking, and enjoying meals with family.

Contrast that with another day when I got caught up in negative conversations about COVID. The negativity drained me, and I accomplished nothing useful. Things are the way they are. The best we can do is focus on what matters and how we spend our time.

Choose the best option to complete the sentence :-

Practicing indifference to uncontrollable things helps to achieve

1. Better focus on global events
2. Fulfilling and lasting happiness
3. Improved emotional reactivity
4. A deeper knowledge of issues

Options 1. 1

Q.5 Read the given passage and answer the four questions that follow :-

In the ancient city of Varanasi, Arjun found his world transformed one monsoon afternoon. Born into a family of hardworking labourers, he was expected to follow in his father's footsteps. Yet, Arjun harboured an unspoken passion for art that no one knew about. As dark clouds gathered and the first raindrops fell, he wandered through the narrow lanes of the old city, seeking solace from the predictable rhythms of life.

That day, as he took refuge under a vibrant awning in a bustling market, Arjun encountered an old painter named Raghav. With paint-splattered hands and eyes that shimmered with decades of experience, Raghav noticed the spark in Arjun's eyes. He invited Arjun into his humble studio, where canvases whispered stories of love, loss, and hope. Inspired by Raghav's gentle mentorship, Arjun discovered his own unique style, blending tradition with innovation.

Over time, his artwork became a mirror reflecting the emotions of the city, and his reputation grew. Arjun's journey from a reluctant son to an emerging artist was not without hardship. Yet, every challenge became a brushstroke in the masterpiece of his life. Eventually, his creations graced galleries beyond Varanasi, uniting cultures and hearts. In every piece, Arjun celebrated the resilience of the human spirit, proving that passion and perseverance can transform even the most ordinary life into a vibrant work of art.

His journey, filled with unexpected lessons and creative breakthroughs, taught him that every struggle offered a chance to begin anew, inspiring his art with hope and transformation.

Determine the primary theme illustrated in the passage :-

1. The preventable hardships for those who choose artistic paths for fulfilling their dreams.
2. The conflicts between urban modernity and ancient traditions in daily life that act as a hindrance in one's path.
3. The fleeting beauty of monsoon afternoons in the ancient city encourages one to follow one's passion.
4. The transformative influence of mentorship and following one's passion despite adversity.
