Q.41 Read the passage and answer the questions:

Petitions

of Sepoys and Images of Revolt

They gave these cartridges to the sowars (mounted soldiers) of the 3rd Light Cavalry, and ordered them to bite them; the troopers objected to it, and said that they would never bite them, for if they did, their religion and faith would be destroyed ... upon this, the British officers paraded the men of the 3 Regiments and having prepared 1,400 English soldiers, and other Battalions of European troops and Horse Artillery, surrounded them, and placing six guns before each of the infantry regiments, loaded the guns with grape and made 84 new troopers prisoners, and put them in jail with irons on them. The reason that the sowars of the Cantonment were put into jail was that we should be frightened into biting the new cartridges. On this account, we and all our country-men, having united together, have fought the British for the preservation of our faith. ... On 25 September James Outram and Henry Havelock arrived, cut through the rebel forces, and reinforced the British garrisons. Twenty days later, Colin Campbell, who was appointed as the new Commander of British forces in India, came with his forces and rescued the besieged British garrison. In British accounts, the siege of Lucknow became a story of survival, heroic resistance and the ultimate triumph of British power. Barker's painting celebrates the moment of Campbell's entry. At the centre of the canvas are the British heroes – Campbell, Outram and Havelock. The gestures of the hands of those around lead the spectator's eyes towards the centre. The heroes stand on a ground that is well lit, with shadows in the foreground and the damaged Residency in the background.

Q.46 Read the passage and answer the questions:

The End

of the Civilization

There is evidence that by c.1800 BCE most of the Mature Harappan sites in regions such as Cholistan had been abandoned. Simultaneously, there was an expansion of the population into new settlements in Gujarat, Haryana and western Uttar Pradesh. In the few Harappan sites that continued to be occupied after 1900 BCE there appears to have been a transformation of material culture, marked by the disappearance of distinctive artefacts of the civilization—weights, seals, special beads. Writing, long-distance trade and craft specialization also disappeared. In general, far fewer materials were used to make far fewer things. Overall, artifacts and settlements indicate a rural way of life in what are called "Late Harappan" or "successor cultures".

What brought about these changes? Several explanations have been put forward. These range from climate change, deforestation, excessive floods, the shifting and/or drying up of rivers, to overuse of the landscape. Some of these 'causes' may hold for certain settlements, but they do not explain the collapse of the entire civilization. It appears that a strong unifying element, perhaps the Harappan state, came to an end. This is evidenced by the disappearance of seals, the script, distinctive beads and pottery, the shift from a standardized weight system to the use of local weights, the decline and abandonment of cities. The subcontinent would have to wait for over a millennium for new cities to develop in a completely different region.

Writing, long-distance trade and craft specialization also disappeared. In general, far fewer materials were used to make far fewer things. Overall, artifacts and settlements indicate a rural way of life in what are called "Late Harappan" or "successor cultures".

What brought about these changes? Several explanations have been put forward. These range from climate change, deforestation, excessive floods, the shifting and/or drying up of rivers, to overuse of the landscape. Some of these 'causes' may hold for certain settlements, but they do not explain the collapse of the entire civilization. It appears that a strong unifying element, perhaps the Harappan state, came to an end. This is evidenced by the disappearance of seals, the script, distinctive beads and pottery, the shift from a standardized weight system to the use of local weights, the decline and abandonment of cities. The subcontinent would have to wait for over a millennium for new cities to develop in a completely different region.

Identify the strong unifying element of the Harappa, whose ending indicates the decline of the Harappan civilization:

1. Scales and Weights
2. Harappan State
3. Long Distance Trade
4. Use of Local Script

Options 1. 1

2. 2

3. 3

4. 4

Q.49 Read the passage and answer the questions:

The End

of the Civilization

There is evidence that by c.1800 BCE most of the Mature Harappan sites in regions such as Cholistan had been abandoned. Simultaneously, there was an expansion of the population into new settlements in Gujarat, Haryana and western Uttar Pradesh. In the few Harappan sites that continued to be occupied after 1900 BCE there appears to have been a transformation of material culture, marked by the disappearance of distinctive artefacts of the civilization—weights, seals, special beads. Writing, long-distance trade and craft specialization also disappeared. In general, far fewer materials were used to make far fewer things. Overall, artifacts and settlements indicate a rural way of life in what are called "Late Harappan" or "successor cultures".
